

Universität
Basel

Research Project

Love and Time

Project funded by own resources

Project title Love and Time

Principal Investigator(s) Krebs, Angelika ; Ben-Ze'ev, Aaron ;

Organisation / Research unit

Departement Künste, Medien, Philosophie / Praktische Philosophie (Krebs)

Project start 01.07.2014

Probable end 31.01.2019

Status Completed

The connection between romantic love and time has always fascinated lovers, who ask themselves if their love will endure always and forever. And if it does, will it be the same as it is now? This chapter argues that romantic love can indeed endure for a long time without necessarily declining into something like friendship or companionate love. In order to show this, it provides various conceptual tools that can help to understand enduring emotions in general and enduring romantic love in particular, such as the distinctions between acute, extended, and enduring emotions, or between superficial and profound emotions. Finally, it tests this position by applying it to the issues of old age, sickness, and death, as exemplified in Michael Haneke's film Amour.

Keywords Love, Romantic Love, Time, Parts of Love, Feelings

Financed by

University funds

Other funds

Add publication

Published results

4495608, Krebs, Angelika; Ben-Ze'ev, Aaron, Love and Time, 978-0-19-939572-9 ; 978-0-19-939574-3, The Oxford Handbook of Philosophy of Love, Publication: Book Item (Buchkap., Lexikonartikel, jur. Kommentierung, Beiträge in Sammelbänden etc.)

Add documents

Specify cooperation partners